WEEKES & CO. LONDON.

My dear Jerushy.

Jerushy came to live with me at Christmas time;
Her cheeks were red, her eyes were blue, her hair was fine;
Her gown was made of silk and lace,
Her clothes came in a wicker case,
A dainty bonnet framed her face,
My dear Jerushy.

Her lovely silken gown was torn in just a week;
Her hair came off, one eye fell out, she could not speak;
Alas! too soon her beauty fled,
Gone from her cheeks the roses red,
At last she even lost her head,
My poor Jerushy.

And now she wears a china head and gown of blue;
And though her body's very thin, her heart is true;
I kiss the lips that once were red,
And when my evening prayers are said,
She goes with me each night to bed,
My dear Jerushy.
